Future Agenda 2.0 is a cross-disciplinary foresight programme, providing a forum for leading experts to discuss how to address the challenges society faces, sharing ideas, visions and solutions to ultimately deliver change.

Patrick Teng, CEO and Founder of Six Capital, said:

"Currencies are influenced by social, economic and political factors and therefore are in a constant state of flux around the world. Due to advancing technology and evolving trade dynamics, the level of disruption in the future is likely to continue to increase. With the stability of a country's currency integral to its economic growth and development, it is critical that we are able to explore the future of currency in order to ensure that we, as a society, are well placed to meet the challenges and take advantage of the future. No-one can predict exactly what the currency markets will look like in ten years' time, but it is likely to be unrecognizable from what we see today."

Dr Tim Jones, Programme Director of the Future Agenda, commented:

"I am delighted that we are able to explore the Future of Currency as part of the Future Agenda 2.0. Currencies have a huge impact on the development of countries around the world and with so much change expected in the near future, I am pleased that alongside Six Capital, we are able to put in place this forum and events around the world."

The Future of Currency events will take place in Jakarta on 26th November, Singapore on 27th November and London on 15th December.

About Future Agenda

The Future Agenda is the world's largest open foresight initiative. It was created in 2009 to bring together views on the future from many leading organizations. Building on expert perspectives that addressed everything from the future of health to the future of money, over 1500 organizations debated the big issues and emerging challenges for the next decade. Sponsored globally by Vodafone Group, this ground-breaking program looked out ten years to the world in 2020 and connected CEOs and mayors with academics and students across 25 countries. Additional online interaction connected over 50,000 people from more than 145 countries who added their views to the mix. All output from these discussions was shared via the futureagenda.org website.

The success of the first Future Agenda Program stimulated several organizations to ask that it should be repeated. Therefore this second program is running throughout 2015 looking at key changes in the world by 2025. Following a similar approach to the first project, Future Agenda 2.0 builds on the initial success and adds extra features, such as providing more workshops in more countries to gain an even wider input and enable regional differences to be explored. There is also a specific focus on the next generation including collaborating with educational organizations to engage future leaders. There is a more refined use of social networks to share insights and earlier link-ups with global media organizations to ensure wider engagement on the pivotal topics. In addition, rather than having a single global sponsor, this time multiple hosts are owning specific topics wither globally or in their regions of interest. Run as a not for profit project, Future Agenda 2.0 is a major collaboration involving many leading, forward-thinking organisations around the world.
