

A TEAM POWERED BY SOLIDARITY

At the United Nations (UN) General Assembly in October 2015, confronted with the global refugee crisis that has seen millions of people in the world displaced, IOC President Thomas Bach announced the creation of the IOC Refugee Olympic Team – the first of its kind – to take part in the Olympic Games Rio 2016.

Supported by Olympic Solidarity, a team of 10 athletes competed in Brazil, inspiring the world with the strength of their human spirit and sending a message of hope to millions of forcibly displaced people in the world.

Following this historical participation, refugee athlete scholarships were established. They are fully funded by the IOC through its Olympic Solidarity programme dedicated to refugee athletes. 56 refugee athletes benefited from Olympic Solidarity Scholarships ahead of Tokyo 2020, 74 ahead of Paris 2024. Through this programme, Olympic Solidarity helps refugee athletes not only to train with the aim of qualifying for the Olympic Games, but also to continue their sporting career and build their future.

The scholarships as well as the Refugee Olympic Team are managed by the Olympic Refugee Foundation (ORF). The ORF was established by the IOC to ensure that young people affected by displacement thrive through sport. Through its work, the Foundation has ensured that almost 400,000 young people affected by displacement are able to access sport, and reap the benefits of doing so.

As a result of Recommendation 11 of Olympic Agenda 2020+5, the strategic roadmap of the IOC and the Olympic Movement approved in March 2021, the IOC decided that there will be a Refugee Olympic Team for the Olympic Games Paris 2024.

29 athletes competed as part of the Refugee Olympic Team Tokyo 2020 and 36 athletes will be competing in Paris.
