Lufthansa Seeheim conference hotel has Germany's best young chef

On Monday 3 April, Florian Bokrant won the title for "German Master" at the "Concours National des Jeunes Chefs Rôtisseurs" cooking competition in Frankfurt am Main. The "Chaîne des Rôtisseurs" competition, an international association of top chefs, has seen young chefs from upscale German restaurants compete against each other for 40 years now. Florian Bokrant, 'demi chef de cuisine', at the Lufthansa Seeheim conference hotel, won against ten other participants. In September, the 24 year old chef will once again have the opportunity to prove his skills during the world championship.

"We are very proud of Florian Bokrant, who has definitely earned this award. He, and all our other chefs, continually surprise guests with their culinary delights. The personal touch and finesse of our employees are what make Lufthansa Seeheim a very special premium conference hotel", says managing director Katharine Schnelting-Anslinger.

The task was to prepare a three-course meal during the cooking competition in accordance with the rules of "Chaîne mondiale", which all participants had to do within a certain time frame. This year the young chefs' shopping baskets contained crayfish, char, Jerusalem artichokes, pigeon, apples, pears and craft beer, among other things. Bokrant created his winning meal using these ingredients, and was the best contestant.

For Lufthansa Seeheim, fine dining has a special significance. The 50 person kitchen team includes chefs with international experience, young chefs and many trainees. Continual training is particularly important for the kitchen managers. Lufthansa Seeheim is one of the most modern conference hotels in Germany. Its unique location and sense of tradition is an inspiration for both Lufthansa employees and conference guests from all over the world. Be it conference, seminar or special event, Seeheim combines professional conferences, hospitality and relaxation to create a very special experience.
