Swiss International Air Lines (SWISS) will be expanding its range of services from Geneva in the Winter 2019/2020 timetable period by adding a new route to Marsa Alam in Egypt. The new weekly service will be provided on Wednesdays 16 and 23 October and then every Thursday from 31 October to 26 March. The flights will be operated with a CS300 aircraft, which has a seating capacity of 145 passengers.

Located on the Red Sea coast, Marsa Alam is a beach vacation destination that is particularly popular among divers. The new route further expands SWISS's services to Egypt, which already include regular Geneva-Hurghada flights. SWISS will be the only airline serving Marsa Alam from Geneva.
